EXPERIENCE

Alysha Stein-Manes provides representation and counsel to LCW clients in all matters pertaining to labor, employment, and education law. Alysha primarily works as a litigator, representing non-profit educational institutions at all levels of the litigation process in state and federal court. She has litigated cases involving discrimination, harassment, and retaliation in the employment context; due process; right-to-work and union fee issues; student and employee disability interactive process and accommodations issues; and the Public Employees' Retirement Law.

Alysha has extensive experience in the retirement and health arenas and regularly provides advice and counsel in the areas of the Affordable Care Act, post-retirement work restrictions, independent contractor status, disability retirement, PEPRRA compliance, PEMHCA (i.e. CalPERS medical), and determining whether compensation is included or excluded from reporting for the purposes of determining pension benefits.
